WORK DONE

Asking people for their second hand clothes via social media and putting it up on the website for easier access to buyers and sellers. This opened up a portal for many people who wanted to get rid of their old clothes.

This up-cycling challenge was a way for students to engage and use their creative side and put to use their DIY skills to revamp their old clothes into something they would love to wear. It was a fun challenge where we saw many new creations and unexpected pieces that turned into fashionable ones.

The Thrift Shop was working towards not only supporting the environment but also the society. The clothes seen in these images were in a good condition and deserved to be passed on to someone who would enjoy wearing them instead of discarding and in turn dumping them in the wastage pile.
